**The McGinley Clinic Hosts Injury Prevention and Recovery Education Events for Athletes and the Community***

This quarter, The McGinley Clinic has focused on educating athletes and the public about innovative, minimally invasive treatments for orthopedic injuries.

At Pro Motocross events, Dr. McGinley spoke at each combine, emphasizing injury prevention and advanced recovery technology. During Loretta Lynn's motocross championships, The McGinley Clinic engaged riders, families, and coaches, discussing new treatments that help athletes recover faster and return to the track. The clinic's goal is to help riders avoid surgery through advanced options like Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP) therapy and stem cell treatments. The clinic is most known for its patented minimally invasive treatment of arm pump and has treated dozens of the top riders in the sport.

In addition, The McGinley Clinic hosted a local community event centered on PRP and stem cell treatments, demonstrating their effectiveness in treating a wide range of orthopedic issues and injuries.

Most recently, the clinic traveled to Indianapolis to PitFit Training, a facility serving top IndyCar and NASCAR drivers. There, Dr. McGinley provided insights into treating common racing-related injuries like carpal tunnel and arm pump using innovative techniques. His passion for patient education was clear, helping trainers, mechanics, and family members understand non-surgical treatments that athletes often overlook. One coach even commented on how crucial it is to stay current on the latest treatments to better guide their athletes.
